ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for initializing multiple processors in an integrated circuit. Each processor is uniquely identifiable. Boot code for the initialization of the processors is written so that any specialized code for a specific processor is accessed using identity of the processor.